

Occupational hygiene monitoring of volatile organic compounds

Principle

The procedure utilizes sampling tubes containing a charcoal adsorbent. When air is sucked through the sampling tube using a calibrated precision air sampling pump, organic compounds are adsorbed to the surface. During analysis the compounds are extracted from the adsorbent and analyzed using capillary gas chromatography.

